

THE INVESTMENT CASE FOR ESG PANELISTS

Matthew Gwyther – Chair

Matthew, now a Partner at Jericho Chambers, edited Management Today for 17 years and during that time won the coveted BSME Business Magazine Editor of the year on a record five occasions. During a 15-year career as a freelancer he wrote for the Sunday Times magazine, The Independent, The Telegraph, The Observer, GQ and was a contributing editor to Business magazine. He was PPA Business Feature Writer of the Year in 2001. Matthew is the main presenter on BBC Radio 4's In Business programme.

Tarquin Henderson

Tarquin heads Echo Research's ESG Practice, Tarquin has over 25 years' experience in corporate and marketing communications working within management consultancy, financial and corporate advisory and directly in industry. Over the last 12 years he has worked in the sustainability and renewable energy sector setting up low carbon consultancy and finance business, ReEnergise in 2010 and then working in a corporate advisory firm focused on Environmental and Social Governance (ESG) strategy.

Hannah Leach

Hannah is a Partner at Houghton Street Ventures, a new venture firm backing companies founded by students and alumni of the London School of Economics, and alongside that, Co-Founder of a global industry-wide initiative, VentureESG, whose aim is to help the VC sector recognise the importance of ESG and to provide resources and guidance to make ESG a standard part of diligence, portfolio management and fund management.

Alan Livsey

Alan Livsey joined the Financial Times Lex column in 2014 after 25 years years in investment management and analysis. Based in London, his specialties include specialist finance, energy, natural resources and telecoms as well as the emerging markets. In the past he worked in Hong Kong and later in Tokyo as a market strategist for Kleinwort Benson. Later he managed equity portfolios, travelling widely in the Americas and Europe. Alan is a graduate of both Oxford University and University of Maryland and holds the Chartered Financial Analyst designation. Until recently he was on the board at the CFA UK. Alan writes regularly for Lex on ESG topics.

Charles Wookey

Charles was one of the founders of Blueprint and a key contributor to the thinking behind the Blueprint approach which asserts that people are not solely self-interested and that business is not solely driven by profit. Charles's working background across business, government, an economic think tank and policy for a major faith institution helped make this a reality. He qualified as a Chartered Accountant at KPMG in London and holds a BA in Physics and Philosophy and a Postgraduate Diploma in Theology from Merton College, Oxford. Charles has been CEO of Blueprint since the charity was formed in 2014.